

From: Brad Hoyle
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/23/02 9:44am
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Microsoft is still up to its old tricks and doesn't intend on letting any company deliver an innovative competitive product. Take in point the legal action Microsoft has taken against Linux distributor "Lindows". This product is using an open source operating system that could run some Microsoft applications. Microsoft is arguing based on trade mark infringement and I cant tell for the life of me how they can justify this. I admit that Windows and Lindows rhyme but that's it. If your a user that cant discern the difference between the two you most likely do not use a PC at all. I want more choice! I want more software security! Its up to the Federal Government to make this happen.

Than You
Brad Hoyle